

ABSTRACT

The present invention provides subtelomeric probes and primer pairs which can be used to develop subtelomeric probes as well as methods of making and using the same. Advantageously, the probes are located in close proximity to the telomere of a chromosome and are generally much smaller than currently available probes.